Investment Manager Monthly Commentary

Portfolio Activity:

EJFI's January 2024 NAV was £98.8² million or GBp162² per share, representing a gain (inclusive of dividends) of 0.80%² for the month.

The underlying portfolio returned a 0.92% gain largely driven by 1.16% return from Securitisations & Related Investments. CDO Equity prices were flat month on month, meaning regular interest accruals generated this return.

Elsewhere, MSRs were down 0.31% on account of mortgage interest rate declines. US Treasuries were flat and the US Bank debt portfolio returned a positive performance of 0.07%. During the month, the Company sold one of its two US Bank debt investments to take liquidity and record a small gain.

The US Dollar marginally appreciated against Sterling during the month resulting in FX gains of 0.19%. The Company hedged approximately 56% of its underlying US Dollar asset exposure as at month end.

Market:

Banking sector performance was fairly uneventful in January up until the 31st when New York Community Bank ("NYCB") reported earnings and the Federal Reserve held its meeting on monetary policy. With regards to NYCB, the bank announced that its qualification as a Category IV bank with greater than $100 billion in assets would require it to invest in new risk management and infrastructure, improve its on-balance sheet liquidity and increase its credit provisioning. As a result, NYCB announced lower than expected earnings of approximately 50% and slashed its dividend by 70%. While the Manager believes that NYCB's issues are company-specific, the announcements were quite a surprise to the market for a bank that had recently executed on an FDIC-assisted acquisition for parts of Signature Bank. The Company's exposure to NYCB through its CDO Equity Tranches was less than 2.5% of 31 January 2024 NAV. This situation remains dynamic and we are watching events closely.

In addition to NYCB's announcements, the Federal Reserve Open Market Committee also acknowledged that while it made sense to cut rates in 2024, a cut in March was unlikely. In response, the Fed Funds futures reflected only a 35% probability of a rate cut in March, but still price almost six cuts in 2024. In a 60 minutes interview subsequent to month-end, Chair Jerome Powell reiterated many of the comments from his press conference and also added that a first cut at 'mid-year' made sense, while remaining data dependent.

Commercial Real Estate Update

While commercial credit quality has been normalising across the industry for the past 18 months or so, NYCB's earnings announcement including an increase in credit provisioning brought the issue back to the forefront of investors' minds. In the opinion of the Manager, there was very little to extrapolate for the industry given the $552 million provision NYCB announced was related to CRE Office loans and rent-regulated multi-family exposures. NYCB management noted that taking the credit allowance to 1.17% of loans better aligns them with other Category IV banks in the $100 billion - $250 billion range. While there has been a tremendous amount of press regarding the demise of commercial real estate, the Manager's conversations with small and medium-sized banks remains constructive and they are still seeing few problems outside large multi-tenant office exposures in central business districts. The Manager believes that the end of rate hikes also likely reduces the tail risk of a deep recession and greater than expected credit quality deterioration for the banking sector as a whole, which serves to underpin the credit quality of much of the Company's underlying exposure.
